Apart from your partner is there someone in your life who you can really trust? How much would you trust with them over your partner?

Yes I have one friend I think I could trust with virtually anything, and several others I would trust implicitly depending on what I was trusting them with. Fortunately I know them well enough to know what I can trust them with and what I can't. My partner has my total trust.

I think I can trust a few friends but they normally let you down by telling someone else. People don't seem to be able to keep things to themselves. I have a few friends I could trust with just about anything, 4 or 5 that I would call my 'best' friends. Apart from that it's just Surfboy.

Depends what your trusting them with, although i trust the other half impecably i wouldnt trust her with my bank card. Im always considered trustworthy with sensitive matter, but for all the wrong reasons its only because im either A. Not listening. B. Forgot it by the time i get home. C. Find the information so boring its not worth sharing.

Even though I'm nearly eighteen, there seems to be very few guys I could trust. Above all my mum and dad, then after that it has to be my two best friends, the most honest girls I know. Finally, my old science teacher and now friend. If he said jump it'd be okay, I would. Y'see, can count them on one hand.

At this present time the only person I can really trust in my life is, MYSELF!!
